Although mostly composed of Germans and Austrians, the Roman Catholic diocese of Münster (German: Mönchensprossen) is the largest diocese in the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Germany (Germany's national state church), and is a member of the German Bishops' Conference (Bekennnisskonferenz). Münster was the first diocese established by the missionary work of Martin Luther in the Thuringian Forest and is the oldest diocese in Germany, the only Roman Catholic diocese in the German state of North Rhine-Westphalia and the only Roman Catholic diocese to be within the boundaries of the Free State of Westphalia. The history of the diocese of Münster begins with the evangelization of the local area during the early medieval period, and the spread of the German language to the region. The diocese has its headquarters in the Münster Cathedral, which was formerly the cathedral of the Holy Roman Empire and the see of the Archbishop of Cologne. According to tradition, Münster is the place where the Apostles Peter and Paul preached on Gallia Cisrhenana, now the Netherlands, on their way to Rome. Description The diocese of Münster extends across the entirety of the Free State of Westphalia, and its seat is in the city of Münster. The diocese has over 1,100 parishes and is divided into a total of 40 deaneries, a few of which are divided into multiple parishes. The diocese has a total of 9 million Catholics, and it is the only Catholic diocese in North Rhine-Westphalia and the only Roman Catholic diocese in Germany to be within the boundaries of the Free State of Westphalia. In addition, the diocese is the only one among those of Germany to have a Latin name, which is a reference to the fact that it was established by Martin Luther. It is a member of the German Bishops' Conference (Bekennnisskonferenz). According to tradition, Münster is the place where the Apostles Peter and Paul preached on
