Senator Ron Wyden of Oregon, the top Democrat on the Senate intelligence committee, is accusing the U.S. government of illegally listening in on him and top aides to CIA Director John Brennan. Wyden told The Oregonian/OregonLive that he wants to know if anyone other than Brennan and his aides were aware of the NSA wiretapping program. In a speech on the Senate floor on Thursday, Wyden says the NSA "clearly broke the law" in not notifying him and other members of Congress. Wyden says that while he respects the president's power to conduct surveillance, he was disturbed to learn the NSA had been secretly monitoring his communications. "I want the administration to be straight with the American people about whether the NSA is collecting its phone records or Internet use on a vast scale and whether it is telling Congress about this spying in violation of its own laws," Wyden said. "It is critical that the public know if the government is intentionally violating the law or blindly violating the law," Wyden said. "The American people have a right to be told. As a matter of policy, the administration should be straight with the American people about whether the NSA is collecting its phone records or Internet use on a vast scale and whether it is telling Congress
