mp4 and other digital video encoders. (Please note: technical information below may be changed by the developer). Usage All executable files of Neat Video Noise Reduction Plug-in come with detailed user manual which describes all functions of the plug-in. In the manual it is described that the plug-in can work with all digital video formats: MPEG-1, MPEG-2, MPEG-4 and H.264. The plug-in has the following features: Automatic correction of: unwanted white noise unwanted color noise "brown" noise unwanted color noise in the form of fluctuations of the color in the background filter profile (3-band, 6-band, 9-band or 2-band) correction of other sources of noise in the form of color fluctuations (or "brown" noise) correction of "bit-mapped noise" automatic selection of parameters of filtering, including: noise reduction level reduction of artifacts parameters of filtering (white balance, contrast, brightness, sharpness) adjustment of color and intensity of noise reduction effect in the form of luminance noise automatic selection of parameters of noise reduction algorithm (3-band, 6-band, 9-band or 2-band) saving of the settings in its default location or as a bookmark saving of the selected filter profile in its default location or as a bookmark saving of the settings of the noise reduction algorithm in its default location or as a bookmark automatically and manually restoring the settings of the filter profile and the noise reduction algorithm from the bookmark saving of the settings in user's defaults folder saving of the settings of the noise reduction algorithm in user's preferences folder embedding noise reduction algorithms in the video codec, therefore making it possible to reduce the noise in the output video. Programs designed to reduce noise, for example DVBDetector, have to be able to communicate with the Neat Video Noise Reduction Plug-in. History The first version of the plug-in was released in 2000. In 2006-2007, the company was changed the name from Neat Audio/Video to Neat Video. In 2012-2013, the development of the plug-in was terminated. In 2019, the development of the plug-in was resumed. The new version of the plug-in is available for free download. References
