the tag itself. Does anyone have an idea on how I can do this? A: You can get font size for any image in the page, by querying the element by 'nodeName' attribute, then get the font-size property from that element. Code: var t = document.getElementById('myimage').style.fontSize; console.log(t); Fiddle Demo

While most iPhone and iPad users have seen the benefits of iOS 9's new and improved Maps app, there's one group of people that have been left wanting: people with Android devices. After all, Google Maps on the Android platform has always been the leading app, but iOS 9's new Maps app is a marked improvement that is set to pull all Google maps apps in the US into one. This has been a thing Google has wanted to do, but due to how Google's Android operating system works, there have been problems and limitations in making the transition happen. However, with the update to iOS 9, this should no longer be an issue. As a result, many Android users are wondering whether they should consider moving to Apple's platform to use iOS 9's new Maps app. Now, though, the answer may no
