Update: September 2015 – All instructions in this article are based on the Windows 7 version of SmartPlayLine. What is SmartPlayLine? Since we started playing computer games, we've observed something quite strange: some of them are more difficult than others, but the ones that are hard for the most of us, can be mastered by an entire community of experts. The best thing is that in most cases, players don't go about doing all the dirty work by themselves. There is a lot of help and tips out there, but no single site that can explain how to complete a certain challenge. You just need to be lucky, and stumble upon a community that shares your interest, and the rest is history. To this day, SmartPlayLine is the World's First and only Community-driven game. That means you can not only play with others from all around the world, but also ask them for help, thanks to a unique feature: multilanguage support. You have the opportunity to play without being bothered by translations. On the other hand, if you are involved in a multiplayer session, your opponent has the same advantage. Some of the best games we've played online were beat on the first try, but this was only because of the way SmartPlayLine is designed. It lets players find the information they want quickly, without any hassle. For example, a bunch of players try to beat a game, and the ones who are stuck record their attempts on YouTube, and share the video with the rest. SmartPlayLine is unique because not only does it let you play multiplayer games, it also offers a slew of new features that most websites miss. Unique gameplay When you install the game, you get your own profile, along with an activity diary. This means you are in charge of your reputation, and your profile can be the same for as many users as you want. What's more, you can have a maximum of 50 players, each with their own profile, but only 5 of them can be online at any given time. In terms of actual gameplay, SmartPlay
