A: Turns out you had your template.php file in the wrong directory. I did the whole site in a directory (with the actual site name / themes / mytheme), but your problem is that the template.php file is in themes/mytheme/ directory, not in mytheme/ directory. I'm pretty sure you just added your custom functions to your theme in the template.php file, that's all. Just change the file to the correct directory. Q: Javascript "Function" without Params/Initialization I need to write a JavaScript function that returns a list of values, without needing to declare any paramters. This would be similar to VB function builder, with the ability to pass values to functions without the need to set up parameters. Is this possible? For example: function func() { return { "x" : 1, "y" : 2 } } var l = func() Here, I need to use a return value to create an object. A: Yes, this is possible by assigning values to a variable inside an object literal: var l = {x : 1, y : 2}; A: Even though you didn't request it, this may also help: Do you need the return statement in a function? A: No. If you do it like: function func() { return { "x" : 1, "y" : 2 } } var l = func(); then it's not a function; it's an object. It's probably what you want, but it's not what you're asking for. :) (1) Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to high temperature ventilating devices, and more particularly to a modular high temperature auxiliary ventilating and heating apparatus.
