The effects of green tea on dioxin levels in the blood of hepatitis patients. The ingestion of high-dioxin containing foods is one of the common sources of dioxin in human. There is a lack of data regarding the effects of green tea on dioxin levels in blood of hepatitis patients. Therefore, the objective of this study is to find the effects of green tea on dioxin levels in the blood of hepatitis patients. Forty patients referred to a Liver Disease Clinic of a University Hospital in Ahvaz with hepatitis B and C and 10 healthy controls were enrolled into this randomized double-blind clinical trial. Hepatitis patients were randomly assigned to drink 600 ml of green tea (25 mg of tea catechins daily for 4 weeks) and the controls to drink 600 ml of water. Dioxin levels in blood samples were measured by high-performance liquid chromatography. Mean serum dioxin level of the control group was 80.1 pg/g lipids, while that of the intervention group was 78.8 pg/g lipids. There was no significant difference in dioxin levels in both groups. Our findings revealed that green tea consumption does not have a significant effect on dioxin levels in the blood of hepatitis patients. The perils of flying I am planning a trip to Europe next month. Part of the trip is going to be by air. I have flown before and been terrified and terrified and terrified. I know that the general level of risk isn't that great, but it's not something I like doing. I travel to Europe fairly often (some months, sometimes not) and I can say that I have never once been sick as a result of flying. Not in Europe, not in Asia, not in Africa. I've been in intense heat before and had a worse-than-usual sore throat, but not even on that trip. What are people's experiences with air travel? What's your personal story with flying? I'm curious.Q: Recurrence relation, $f(n)=2^n$ One of the statics problem was: Let $f(n)=2^n$, prove that $f(n)$ is monotonously increasing and find the domain and range of the function. I've tried using induction to prove the monotonously increasing argument. The problem is that the base case $n=1$ is: $f(n$

Model of magnetic and thermal coupling in multiple nanoscale metal layers. We investigate thermal and magnetic coupling between layers of iron thin films with thicknesses ranging from a single atomic layer (2 nanometer) to 100 nanometer. We have fabricated hybrid structures containing Fe layers deposited on a Si substrate with two metal gates. The temperature-dependent resistance of these hybrid structures shows a new functional behavior: the resistance undergoes a sharp drop with temperature, with a significant reduction of 50% for the smallest thickness (2 nm). Moreover, this hybrid nanostructure is used to demonstrate that thermal and magnetic coupling of these coupled nanoscale structures can be efficiently modulated by the height of the gates.Sports Top Stories SIN CITY ALLEYCATS: After making a climb from where they were last season in the South Atlantic League, the Oakland A's are beginning to see a bit of a downturn in their stock. It started with an October slide to the end of their eight-game winning streak on their road trip from Camden to Hagerstown. Oakland still won 10 games on the strength of their pitching, which now has some thought their rotation could be full of potential starting material in the fall, but the A's have lost 2 of their last three games. In that time, they lost 4 straight one-run games against Florida, lost 7 of 8 against the Pirates and dropped four out of five in Charleston. The problem now has become the fact that those guys aren't even pitching in front of the few people in Oakland that are buying this losing streak. Are the A's selling themselves short in the process of their enthusiasm to play better ball than their talent level justifies, or does the A's really need to find answers elsewhere? The middle ground of holding your expectations for everyone at the same time seems to be the answer of not being satisfied with a 3-5 team at this point in time. At the same time, the A's are just 8-13 over the last 20 games. STARTING PITCHERS: When you find yourself in the middle of a stretch that your team won't let go without losing, you need to take a closer look. Over the last 20 games, the Athletics have used 15 different starting pitchers, 6 coming out of the bullpen. As the game reaches the seventh inning, more often than not, the Oakland starting rotation is left to try to protect a lead. The rotation has gone 9
