Are Computer Speeds More Important than Form Factors? If you have a very specific form factor that you can't exactly get a computer with, but you need everything your computer does to match that form factor, then you may want to consider buying a PC that has a couple of forms or specifications. For instance, if you have to work on a table that doesn't have a flat surface, a laptop would be the better option. Meanwhile, a portable computer would make sense if you're looking to keep all of your functions in one spot. The fact that both of these options are limited by function and form doesn't mean one is superior to the other. If you have a preference for a PC with certain components, such as a tablet, a gaming PC, or a mini PC, then you may want to consider it. After all, laptops have typically represented the baseline for the rest of the PC market over the past couple of years, so it may be time to stray b7e8fdf5c8
